The state legislature passed the 'Energy Jobs Act,' that would encourage more oil and natural gas exploration in North Carolina as well as expand energy-related industries and jobs. Governor Perdue vetoed this bill, stating it infringed on the powers assigned to the governor by requiring her to work with other states and the NC legislature on energy exploration options. Supporters say the bill would lead to more affordable and clean energy while also creating new jobs. Opponents say the bill would allow offshore drilling and the natural gas exploration that they feel is hazardous to the environment. Governor Perdue vetoed this bill.
